

HOW CHARISMATIC ARE YOU

Your executive presence snapshot

Prepared for Michael Wong — Portfolio Director

Solid capability

You have a strong presence foundation, with one or two signals that could sharpen your influence.

PRESENCE PATTERN: THE STEADY AUTHORITY

Primary development area: Appearance

Presence Profile Map

How You Probably Show Up

When you enter a room, your presence likely depends less on performance and more on steadiness. People often experience you as composed and credible when the stakes are clear. Your credibility comes from holding your judgment under pressure and making decisions others can lean into. Across the board, your leadership signal already carries weight in the rooms that matter to you. Where your impact may soften is in moments where the visual signal is doing most of the work and small details cost you. Your profile is even enough that people get a similar read on you across very different rooms. Your growth edge is treating the visual and physical signal as part of the message, not as decoration.

Presence Pattern: The Steady Authority

You create confidence through composure, judgment, and steadiness. Your next level is converting respect into active followership.

Your Top 3 Strengths

BEHAVIOR

You decide with imperfect information when timing matters.

WHY IT MATTERS

Senior leaders trust people who move when the data is good enough, not perfect.

USE IT INTENTIONALLY

Pick one stalled decision this week and move it forward with what you already know.

BEHAVIOR

You adjust your firmness to fit what the moment requires.

WHY IT MATTERS

Range is what makes a leader trusted across very different rooms.

USE IT INTENTIONALLY

In your next two meetings, pick one to be deliberately firmer and one to be deliberately more flexible.

BEHAVIOR

You create clarity when situations are ambiguous.

WHY IT MATTERS

Ambiguity tax is real, and you reduce it for everyone around you.

USE IT INTENTIONALLY

End every meeting this week with the decision, the owner, and the next checkpoint.

Your Top 3 Development Priorities

BEHAVIOR

You may visibly tense up when the stakes are high.

RISK

Others will mirror your stress instead of borrowing your composure.

TRY THIS

Build a pre-meeting reset routine: two slow breaths, a clear opening line, and one anchor sentence.

BEHAVIOR

Your initial response may be driven by emotion before thought catches up.

RISK

Your most-remembered moments can be your least intentional ones.

TRY THIS

Build a 10-second pause into your next charged exchange. Use it to choose your first sentence.

BEHAVIOR

You may react before separating facts from emotion.

RISK

Your sharpest reactions can land in the room you most need to influence.

TRY THIS

When triggered, name what you observe out loud before naming what you think.

Your Next Best Move

Focus area: Connection

Choose one key stakeholder and schedule a conversation with no immediate ask. Your goal is to understand their pressures, not pitch your priorities.

Want the full leadership mirror?

The full report includes Top 5 strengths, Top 5 development priorities, detailed coaching notes, five tailored experiments, and a 30-day executive presence plan. USD 10.